THE TILTON-BEECHER CASE.

A Jam in the Court Room.

NEW YORK June 9—The Brooklyn court room was packed this morning with spectators The entrance of Beach, who was to deliver the closing address, was the signal for a storm of applause which was checked with difficulty Fullerton arrived shortly after, and received a similar ovation Tilton was in his usual place behind his counsel closely surrounded by the surging multitude thronging so that Judge Neilson gave instructions to the officers in charge to make some arrangements to prevent a similar occurrence in future The judge cautioned the crowd to preserve the utmost silence

Commencement of the Closing Address by Beach.

Beach rose to address the jury at 11 o'clock He said at last Tilton had an opportunity of being heard in a court of justice after having been overwhelmed with calumnies—prosecuted by all the wealth of a man whom the genius of Wilkinson claimed to be the greatest man on earth He referred to the church investigation as a one sided and packed trial, in which the tribunal was composed of friends of the accused, in which the latter was represented by counsel, and in which the accuser was deprived of every advantage which the nature of the case required It was hoped in this way to satisfy the public, but the public clamor had convinced Beecher's friends of their mistake. Beach said that in making predictions and repeating insulting epithets until the ear was pained by them he wouldn't attempt to vie with counsel for defense They had a duty to perform of the most momentous character They were to pronounce upon the innocence or guilt of the greatest preacher in Christendom They had been asked to declare by their verdict that Tilton Moulton, and Mrs Moulton were perjurers, and had no place in a court of justice. He said Evarts had personally appealed to the members of the jury, and had assumed to know what verdict they would render Beach said he knew the influences which had surrounded the jury during the trial, and knew the immense influence of the powerful organization behind the defense and knew how it had been created Evarts had asked for the 100 eyes of an Argus and for the 100 hands of Briareus but had held them and more too. He had also gold, and it had been placed where it would do the most good. He said if counsel on the other side spoke with authority of the jury they had been controlled by the influence of Plymouth church If they allowed their opinions to be governed by invective and assertion, then he had nothing to hope from their verdict. He was no orator, and had but plain simple logical argument to present, if the jury would be governed by the logic of facts. If they would hear the case of plaintiff before they consigned him (Moulton) to infamy he demanded a verdict at their hands. He asked for no verdict against Beecher which was not based upon truth. Beach said the extraordinary assertion of the other side that plaintiff had any case was contradicted by the time and labor they had spent in trying to overthrow it. The witness for the defense, upon whom all argument of counsel rested was Beecher himself Porter made the astonishing declaration that Tilton had been contradicted by 34 witnesses assertions which could only be met by plain denial On no material point had Tilton been contradicted except by Beecher. Beach here referred to his association with Porter in courts for more than 30 years and to the character which Porter had always maintained as a lawyer and a man and he had been greatly surprised that a gentleman so distinguished should have conducted himself as he had in this case Porter has always before appeared as the leader of the side, but in this case he had acted in a subordinate capacity There was no disgrace in that for no one could be humiliated by following the lead of one so eminent as Evarts. The humiliation was in the character of the service which Porter performed in his virulent attack upon plaintiff and his principal witness On one occasion when Porter was shaking his fist wildly in plaintiff's face exclaimed, "Down, down to hell, and say I sent you there" he (Beach) looked around in some alarm for the personal safety of his client. He was anxious to know what had become of him, but found him there, looking calmly at Porter and somewhat amused at the exhibition He said the counsel for the defense had spent 13 days not in trying to establish the innocence of Beecher but to destroy Tilton and his supporters Beach asked the jury to remember the letters of Tilton to his wife which had been read in court and the testimony of Beecher himself in regard to Tilton's character, and asked if his character could be such as represented [illegible] thought before he concluded he would be able to show the jury that Beecher was not quite perfect—[illegible]

The case was one which never should have been brought into the court except under pressure of necessity

Beach said there were numerous instances in which plain facts were misrepresented by counsel for defense in order to furnish the basis of attack upon Tilton Porter expressed extreme surprise that the complaint in this case charged seduction and adultery at the home of Beecher and also spoke of the coolness with which the tenth of October had been selected to avoid an alibi. He had drawn the most attractive picture of the home of Beecher which he surrounded by his family and didn't know where the seduction was accomplished, in [illegible] and adultery were the [illegible] which were furnished to Tilton by his wife and Beecher According to the plaintiff's testimony it was simply a question of veracity between Tilton and Beecher Beach referred to the allegations of Porter that certain testimony by Bessie Turner and other witnesses for the defense had not been contradicted by plaintiff's witness when recalled Now he submitted to the court whether it would have been proper for him after his witnesses had once given their versions of occurrences to interrogate them over again as to exactly the same points [illegible] the witnesses for defense had given a different version. Great complaint was made of cruelty and unkindness on the part of Tilton because on Mrs Tilton's return from [illegible] he found the housekeeper Ellen Dennis in her place at the head of the table Ellen Dennis was Mrs Tilton's cousin a maiden lady somewhat aged who in Mrs Tilton's absence acted as housekeeper and occupied her place at table When Mrs Tilton arrived from her visit she found her there. There was nothing indelicate or inappropriate in that

Then it was alleged by Bessie Turner that Tilton had repulsed his wife rudely when she spoke to him about servants Suppose this be true [illegible] great men and kind hearted men had been charged with harshness who had been annoyed by domestic duties and had not been thoughtful about those little trivial details of domestic kindnesses which some women were disposed to magnify Ellen Dennis was [illegible] her gray [illegible] but granting that Tilton was unkind in his household—granting he walked about the house at night to find a safe place for peace—granting all foibles which rendered his home unhappy did that give Beecher the right to violate its sanctity? The very facts may have tempted the defendant to enter upon his work of seduction So of all extraneous issues which had been thrust upon the jury Suppose Theodore was adored of Victoria Woodhull as he had been charged and supposing less than man or than brute he had seduced at Winsted a young girl entrusted to his care how did that affect the plain issue in this cause? All this if true did not overthrow the confession of this defendant the history of the letters which his counsel passed over so delicately and the narratives of creditable witnesses who sustain the charge of plaintiff All the allegations against the conduct of Tilton in his household and with [illegible] did not diminish the sin of Beecher or lessen the requirements of law and justice for its punishment.

Recess

After recess Beach resumed his address He spoke of Porter's assertion that Tilton had garbled the Griffith Gaunt letter in its publication and quoted a passage in which extracts from the letter were used by Tilton in his sworn statement Tilton mostly quoted a part of this letter in support of his position with no misrepresentation and his learned friend was unjust and ungenerous in the use he had attempted to make of it He said he wasn't especially favorable to the mode of argument which sought to enlist the sympathies of the jury upon one side on the ground that the popular verdict had been given in its favor but if this mode was to be employed he wished it to rest upon a sound basis He denied that the popular verdict had been recorded for Beecher as had been asserted and named a number of well known newspapers as an indication by their course of the popular sentiment in favor of Tilton. This was a matter he should have been ashamed to allude to but for the example of his learned friend It was said by Evarts that all the best classes of society in the vicinage had gathered around Beecher Where was Dr Storrs Dr Schuyler Dr Buddington Dr Talmadge, Dr Duryea and Dr Vandyck? He had seen Plymouth church in all its glory, and the parasites of Beecher exerting their influence in and out of court but had not seen these representatives of sister churches hastening to extend hands to the defendant Their absence was no proof of guilt, but the attitude of the jury of the vicinage should not be misrepresented He should not make such appeals to the supposed prejudices of the jury as had been made by the other side The jury had an oath in Heaven and could not lay perjury upon their souls Even if Beecher was found innocent he was sullied and damaged and could never stand in the pulpit again in the same grand and heroic character as before. If Tilton was sustained by the jury his future would be clouded his home still desolated, and innocent children must suffer from the blight of disgrace There had not been evidence so far to show that Tilton had flinched from his fidelity to his wife and family Both my learned friends thought they found some contradiction between somebody and Tilton which led them to expatiate on his gray hairs Porter commented on it as a strong proof of depravity It was remarkable that such gentlemen as Evarts and Porter should remark at such length upon the subject The truth was Tilton had no gray hairs and the letter did not assert he had any Talk about the unfriendliness and hate of Tilton and Beecher If it is true that Beecher the chosen friend of the house debauched this man's wife and defiled his hearthstone nothing that the court and jury would do could satisfy that revenge It would exist so long as both men would breathe With all this passion he was strengthened by his love for his wife and children and he had withheld his hand from being stained with the blood of his injurer Porter touched on the arrogance exhibited by Tilton as to the distribution of the church missionary funds but all this was for the purpose of making the jury believe that Tilton was puffed up with his own egotism The next accusation against Tilton was that he quoted in the Bacon letter a garbled edition of the letter of contrition or apology and failed to give that portion of it that was favorable to Beecher and this was a serious imputation and required to be examined to see if they had disproven Tilton's integrity, or any of the witnesses produced for him Beach then read the portion of the letter referred to and said Tilton had not put in a word or suggestion in the document imputing an offense to Beecher On the contrary it shields and defends both But Bacon had characterized Tilton as a knave and a dog and said he was living off Beecher With this imputation to rest and not be denied how was this to be rebutted but by the simple relation of facts with regard to his dealings with the church and the Westchurches and there Tilton quoted from Beecher's letter and what part did he omit Porter says he omitted that portion of it most favorable to Beecher Counsel read the portion which was not quoted and appealed to the jury if there was anything in it which was favorable to Beecher Both these learned counsel had misrepresented another fact Both had said that Tilton in the summer of 1874 had sent word to Beecher by Redpath that he was going to change his tactics Tilton did send word that he was going to charge adultery Why did he do it? Why up to this time these men had been working with the motive of shielding Mrs. Tilton It was the policy of silence, and Tilton up to that period in pursuance of that policy had said the charges were of improper proposals on the part of Beecher towards his wife It was true Tilton declared his wife was pure as an angel and that the charges were improper proposals and it was in this vein that the papers were prepared which roused the hostility of Beecher What was there in the letter of Bacon except a quotation from his own letter to Tilton that forced Beecher into the angry mood? Only that quotation which of all the letter of contrition he swears on the stand is true The opposing counsel next day say Mrs. Moulton on the stand pronounced Tilton as treacherous and they charge her with being a conspirator against Beecher acting under the influence of her husband What were the circumstances under which Mrs. Moulton made use of these expressions asked the counsel After which he read to the jury Mrs Moulton's evidence on the subject There was nothing in this testimony said counsel that justified the other side in saying Mrs Moulton regarded Tilton with loathing or called him treacherous

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DESTRUCTION BY FIRE

A correspondent writing from Jacinto, Colusa county California says

A fire occurred on the Gupton ranch Jacinto Colusa county California—on Monday, May 31st during a trial of the great Gladin thrashing machine The wind was blowing hard from the north and a spark from the engine set fire to some straw close to the thrasher, and in less than two minutes over an acre of stubble and barley in shuck was in flames the fire traveling in a straight course to the large barn containing 100 head of mules and horses with their harness and the hay yard containing about 50 tons of hay The hay caught fire twice but owing to a good supply of water and the noble exertions of the hands it was extinguished Had the fire run three feet further the whole of the premises, including dwellings workshops and all the vast machinery for farming 12,000 acres of land must have been destroyed thereby causing a loss of at least $150,000 So providential an escape does not often occur

OVER SIX MILES HIGH

THE HIGHEST MOUNTAIN IN THE WORLD [illegible] AN ISLAND WONDERLAND

[From the New York Sun]

For many years past Mount Everest in that portion of the great Himalaya range which occupies the western part of the strange kingdom of Nepaul immediately north of India has been regarded as the highest mountain in the world It is known to the Nepalese as Gaurisankar but the English named it Everest in honor of a distinguished officer of the British Indian topographical survey Its snow capped summit is 29,002 feet, or nearly five miles and a half above the level of the sea Of course no one has ever ascended it to this height but its altitude like that of the other lofty peaks of the Himalaya was ascertained by triangulation and until the present time it has not been supposed that any higher land existed on the earth

If the news be true however which has lately come to us from the more distant east there is a loftier peak than Mount Everest in the great island of Papua or New Guinea This vast region, extensive enough to form six States as large as New York is as yet almost wholly unexplored except along its coasts Lying close to the equator where the Indian ocean and the Pacific meet this the home of the cassowary and the bird of paradise a country grand in its scenery rich in its vegetation, and abounding in curious and beautiful forms of animal life—the veritable wonderland of the globe An attempt to explore the unknown interior of the island was made from Torres Strait, which separates it from Australia by Capt J A Lawson in the year 1872, and if we may believe his published narrative of the journey which has just appeared in London he advanced several hundred miles inland, and about midway between the north and south coasts discovered a mountain 32,783 feet high, which he named Mount Hercules

The height of the mountain—over six miles—is not the only remarkable thing about it. Its apparent elevation is but little less than its actual elevation It instead of rising from a lofty table land like the plateau of Central Asia it stands in a comparatively low plain only about two thousand feet above the ocean and this gives a clear rise of more than 30,000 feet above the surrounding country. The traveler standing at its base could look up and see its snowy peak towering 30,000 feet skyward from where he stood Under such circumstances the altitude of a mountain is appreciated

Captain Lawson tells us that he undertook the ascent formidable as it appeared. He did not reach the top, but we believe the achievement which he relates is unparalleled in the records of mountaineering Accompanied by one servant, he set out from the foot at four o clock in the morning They passed through dense forests in the first two thousand feet of perpendicular progress found the limit of tree growth at eleven thousand feet and by nine o clock had reached a point fourteen thousand feet above the sea level—almost as high as the famous Matterhorn A thousand feet higher was the snow line, and they began to suffer from the cold As they pressed on, drowsiness began to overcome them Nothing was visible but snow of the most dazzling whiteness. Every peak and crag was covered with it, and it hung over the edges of the cliffs in long fleecy masses' Their eyes were effected by the glare, and they felt themselves growing more and more lethargic At length blood began to flow from our noses and ears,' says Captain Lawson, and my head ached in a distracted manner I saw that our only chance of preserving life was to retreat without delay, for we were in a pitiful plight Our lips and gums and the skin of our hands and faces were badly cracked and bleeding, and our eyes were bloodshot and swollen to an alarming extent The thermometer had sunk to twenty two degrees below freezing point, and the air was so rarified that we were gasping rather than breathing Our staves fell from our grasp and we could not pick them up again so benumbed were our arms and hands It was now one o clock, and the greatest elevation we had attained was 25,314 feet

Then they turned back, descended to the limit of the snow in three hours and arrived at their camp at the base of the mountain about half past seven in the evening Thus in fifteen hours and a half they had ascended an absolute height of 23,000 feet to an elevation which we believe is greater than any ever before attained by man upon the surface of the earth, although balloonists have occasionally gone higher

A REMARKABLE DISASTER

EXPLOSION OF A SODA WATER FOUNTAIN—A SCORE OF PERSONS BURIED IN THE RUINS—THE EXACT CAUSE OF THE ACCIDENT UNKNOWN—A HORSE-CAR THROWN FROM THE TRACK AND A CARRIAGE OVERTURNED

BOSTON May 26 —The city was startled to night just before dusk by the report, which traveled with marvelous rapidity that a terrific explosion had occurred not far from the new Globe Theater, on Washington street and that several people had either been killed or dreadfully mangled The report proved to be not far from correct The explosion occurred in a building on the corner of Washington and Lagrange streets at about 6 30 o'clock, just when the thoroughfare was most crowded The building was occupied on the ground floor by an apothecary store, in which a large soda business was done, on the second floor by a tailoring establishment and on the floors above as a lodging house Suddenly, when several people were drinking at the soda fountain in the apothecary store, something underneath the fountain it is not at this moment known just what exploded with a sound like a smothered report of a cannon and immediately the whole building was lifted up and then brought down with a terrible crash amid the cries and shrieks of many people

The effect of the explosion was tremendous. The earth was shaken for some distance as if by an earthquake Glass was shattered on buildings all about and on every side All the clocks in the vicinity were stopped A hack filled with ladies was overturned and the occupants thrown out Marvelous as it may seem, a crowded horse car going down town, filled with passengers was blown from the track the horses tossed to the opposite sidewalk, and had it not been for the presence of mind of the driver who pulled up his horses and hitched them on to the other end of the car and drove like mad with the affrighted passengers up town there would have been a much larger list of casualties to chronicle At the moment of the explosion no flame was seen, but immediately after the place was filled with dust and flying debris and smoke, and the fire alarms were sounded The Fire Department responded with alacrity

The work of recovering the unfortunate occupants of the building was begun in most systematic fashion Ten were soon recovered, and the work is now going on The fire having been quickly subdued, the work is pursued by the light of huge gas jets made by cutting the pipes as they protrude out of the debris and in the use of calcium lights fixed in a building on the opposite side of the street The building was five stories in height, and had a frontage of twenty five feet on Washington street. In its rear, No 14 Lagrange street was a small three-story brick building, and this also was totally demolished The statements of eye witnesses of the catastrophe are of thrilling interest One man at the moment of the explosion happened to be standing in front of a building opposite Dows' corner The first incident which attracted his attention was the abrupt flight of a hack from the street to the sidewalk where he stood Mr A R Corliss who was looking into a hat store at the corner of Washington and Kneeland streets, a half block away, says the first thing he noticed was the toppling over of the walls and the building, and the terrific crashing of the rafters as they fell. He saw a carriage occupied by ladies overturned, and an instant later a woman fell or jumped from the third floor to the street In his words, "She shot down like a rocket"

During the search for the wounded the windows of all the surrounding buildings were crowded, and Washington street was filled with a solid mass of men and boys The most absurd stories concerning the number of the killed circulated about the city and stimulated the intense popular excitement At 10 o'clock the firemen got the last of the shaky floors cut down and all the remaining timbers fell in with a tremendous crash Warren Hook and Ladder Company arrived shortly afterward to cart away the timber The firemen were working with a will, tossing the heavy joists and bricks into the street with wonderful rapidity in their sad search for the bodies of the mangled and the dead Now and then they were spurred on by the excited crowd, and with redoubled energy bent to their task Suddenly a loud cheer was heard The eager crowd pressed forward, but were kept back by the policemen.

The next minute the animate form of a human being was dragged from the debris His name was ascertained to be Samuel T Frazer One man remained buried under the ruins for more than half an hour confined but not injured He remained wonderfully cool, saying 'Take your time, boys help others first I can wait.' The brave fellow was saved and escaped uninjured While confined he could not move in the least After a number of bodies had been taken from the ruins orders were given to suspend operations for a while until portions of the wall which tottered above had been pulled down This was accomplished quickly and without accident, and work was soon resumed

As to the cause of the disaster there are many theories It is the most accepted theory that the explosion must have been caused by gas, but how it could have been so violent it is impossible to determine. The building was a substantial structure, erected in the ante-bellum day It was taxed for about $50,000

A MEMORY OF WYOMING

The beautiful valley of Wyoming, on the banks of the Susquehanna, in Luzerne county Pennsylvania, is historic ground, and is also well known to all lovers of poetry and song Dr W H Van Doren records in the Evangelist an incident which we do not recollect having seen mentioned before, in connection with the massacre of the pioneer settlers in the valley

It was in the beginning of July, 1778, that an aged saint who, with his four sons, lived on a mountain overlooking the valley, found that his barrel of meal was nearly exhausted and bade his sons fill their sacks with grain, and early in the morning descend the long road to the mill in the valley As requested, before daylight each of the boys had fed his horse, and they were all prepared by sunrise for their journey And as the day would be too far spent to have their grain ground, they were accustomed at such times to spend the night near the mill in Wyoming

As the patriarch came forth in the morning from the closet of prayer, and said to the waiting sons "Not to day," the young men were greatly surprised 'But, father our supply is used up and why shall we delay?' they said, as they turned and gazed over the valley which lay in calm and quiet peacefulness before them

"Not to day my sons" repeated with emphasis by the man of prayer satisfied the youths that the father meant what he said He added "I know not what it means, but in my prayer my mind was deeply impressed with this word Let them abide till the morrow"

Without charging their venerated parent with superstition or ignorance the obedient sons yielded to his word unsaddled their beasts, placed them in their stalls, and waited for another morning to come.

That memorable night a horde of savages, with torch and tomahawk, entered Wyoming valley and commenced their work of destruction and it is said before the bloody drama ended not a house barn, church, school or mill escaped the flames, and few of the inhabitants escaped the sudden but deadly blows of the savages From one end of the valley to the other the settlers were butchered or burned with remorseless fury

In the morning at sunrise the father and sons were standing on the highest point and lo! the valley was filled with volumes of ascending smoke and flames The awful truth flashed on their minds The aged saint kneeled down with his sons on the mountain-top and in humble, adoring prayer thanked God for the promise, "The Angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him."

THURSDAY MORNING, JUNE 10, 1875.

ONCE MORE.

We do not care to pursue the discussion of Secretary Chadwick's official conduct any further than is necessary to bring out the truth; and we should perhaps not refer to it again at present, had not the Secretary chosen to prolong it by coming back to it himself, and that too in a manner that looks much as if he were willing to place us in a false position. After the letter of McDonald appeared in the OREGONIAN, the Salem Record contained an editorial article in reply to it, which opened with the statement that the editor of that paper had gone to Mr. Chadwick about the matter and got from him the facts set forth in the article. In that article appeared this;

> As to the other charges against him, made on the strength of what Watkinds and others have said, we made no inquiry, but he informs us that on these and all other matters pertaining to his official relation and conduct he invites the most full and ample scrutiny.

What "other charges" were here referred to? The other charges that appeared in the OREGONIAN besides those relating to the matter of rents. But not one of those other charges had been made by Watkinds directly or indirectly; and we replied, that to dismiss grave charges with a general allusion to Watkinds, when Watkinds had nothing in the world to do with them, was a prevarication. To this the Record, after premising that it has again been to Mr. Chadwick on the subject, takes exception, saying it was not Mr. Chadwick, but the Record that spoke of Watkinds; and adding:

> Charging a public officer with "prevarication" in such a flippant way as that isn't as high an order of journalism as we expect the OREGONIAN to display, nor is it calculated to win from that officer such information as the public he serves is entitled to.

As to whether it was Mr. Chadwick or Record that shoved the whole matter off with an irrelevant reference to Watkinds they may settle between themselves. We had the Record's statement that it sought and obtained its information from the Secretary, and if that was not correct we cannot help it. But the reference to Watkinds in a general way as the author or inspirer of the "other charges" was a mere prevarication; and whether Mr. Chadwick or the Record was at fault, it was not flippancy to call it a prevarication. When journalism gets to be of so "high an order" that it hesitates to call things by their right names, because the subject happens to be one that touches a "public officer," it gets too high to be of any particular account. A public officer is but a public servant and a common citizen—a very common one sometimes; and while we recognize that something is due to official position, we do not propose to take off our hat and stand upon our knees while engaged in the discharge of the duty of telling the public of his mistakes or his misdeeds. Nor do we feel at all intimidated by the remark about the "way to win from that officer such information as the public he serves is entitled to." We have not wooed the Secretary; and shall try to get along without him, if we do not win him. And as there appears to be a disposition to dispute about matters of taste in the manner of treating this subject, we take the liberty to suggest further that this talk about the best way to "win" from Mr. Chadwick information which, as he admits, the public are entitled to demand as a right, is of questionable propriety. It is of entirely too "high an order." It does not sound well, though it may sound a long time.

A PACIFIC COAST FINANCIER STRIKES IT RICH.

If reports are trustworthy Senator Jones of Nevada, has thus soon had some valuable instruction in that school which is said to be the only institution whose lessons are at all profitable for a certain class of persons. In other words, it is declared that the light of the Senator's financial genius, which only a little while ago astonished by its brilliancy the world upon which it suddenly burst, has been snuffed out as suddenly by a gentleman of New York, not wholly unknown to fame, yclept Jay Gould. After President Grant made him the central figure in financial circles in the United States, by dedicating to him a marvellous effort of his own on the currency problem, and possibly in consequence thereof, the Senator became conscious of the possession of certain powers of which he had been theretofore unconscious. He had bought and sold mining stocks in San Francisco to some extent before, and with no indifferent success; but he now felt that field of operations was entirely too limited. It cramped his genius and crippled his aspirations. He would therefore betake himself to Wall street, where he could at least amuse himself for a while, and await the coming of events that might enable him to pass on into a broader sphere of activity. So to Wall street he went, where the first thing he did was to capture Jay Gould, and make himself a director in a railway, of which that gentleman had the controlling stock. It was something of a condescension for him to take possession of Gould. The rest of the New York stock men, the Drews and Vanderbilts and the like, were entirely too small game for him; and Gould was only large enough, because there was none larger to be found. The first thing he did after getting himself made a director, was to begin to bull the stock of the corporation. He bought and sold and bought and sold, and every time he bought higher than he had just sold, and sold higher than he had just bought; and the stock was going right up. Up it went and still up, till from thirty-five or forty it touched one hundred and seventy, quite submerging all its previous high-water marks. He was now ready to give it one more boost, the last it would probably stand, and for some time had been accumulating shares for the purpose of a final sale. Jay Gould kept admiring his skill and courage and selling stock to him. It is said the Senator could have come off once three or four hundred thousand dollars winner, but he wanted something worth while. In the language of a distinguished political leader of Oregon, he must have "something big." And he got it. One morning he woke up and found there were no buyers for his stocks. The tide turned just a day too soon. The financial luminary went into voluntary eclipse for a few hours, in order that observations might be taken. Then it was discovered that Mr. Gould had bought up all the outside stock that was to be had, when it was down, and had been simply dealing out shares to him as they were wanted till he saw the maximum was about reached, when he suddenly dealt out all he could get the Senator to take, and immediately set about bearing the market. The bubble of course collapsed as soon as it was pricked, and Jay Gould got back his stocks at about the original price, while the financial prodigy placed the sum of seven hundred and forty thousand dollars to the disagreeable side of the profit and loss account. He opened his eyes very wide, and saw the point. He saw, moreover, with eyes still wider open, his scalp swinging gracefully from the belt of the innocent youth who had been securing stock for him with infinite difficulty in order to help him to the realization of his dream of "something big." They do say the Senator is disgusted and scandalized with the immoralities of New York stock gambling; and it is even whispered that he expresses to his friends, in a confidential way, that he don't believe the President knows a good financial head when he sees one.

Bishop Clark, of Nebraska, has published a formula of prayer against the grasshoppers. That is doubtless well enough; at any rate it can do no harm; but unless we greatly overestimate the abilities of the average Western American in the use of English, there has been no difficulty in finding words sufficiently expressive to make the Almighty understand that the people of Nebraska are decidedly opposed to this grasshopper business.

An exchange makes mention that ex-Senator Pomeroy, of Kansas, claims to have invented an ink for canceling postage stamps which is thoroughly indellible. If the ex-senator could only push his invention a little farther and produce an ink that would cancel a page or two in his own history, it would be worth while; but it is to be feared those pages are as thoroughly indellible as his postage stamp ink.

The San Francisco Bulletin compliments Joseph N. Teal on his valedictory address at St. Augustine College, on "poetic composition," saying it "evinced a correct appreciation in the writer of the value of poetical composition in perpetuating the great deeds of men in peace and war. His valedictory words were eminently appropriate and won hearty applause."

The reason why Germany has a million more women than men is laconically given thus: "Slaughter in war and freedom in America."

CONSECRATION.—St. James' Episcopal chur McMinnville, was consecrated on Sunday l by Bishop Morris, assisted by the Rev. R. Summers, the minister in charge, the Rev. H. Babcock, of Salem, and the Rev. J. Sellwood, of Oregon City. The "Request consecrate" was read by Dr. H. V. V. Joh son, the senior warden of the parish, and "Sentence of Consecration" was read by Rev. Mr. Summers. The Bishop preached sermon and administered the Holy Commu nion. This is considered one of the pretti churches that the Episcopalians have erect in our State, and that it has been done very moderate cost, considering the go effect produced. The offering at the con cration service was for diocesan mi sions, to aid other congregations in th efforts to accomplish what had been do here. The Bishop stated that within the l two weeks he had laid the corner-stone three churches, and that six churches we now in process of erection in his diocese; th some of these would need help from the old and stronger congregations before they w entirely completed. These churches now bei built are at Albany, Dalles City, Pendleto Cove, Union and Baker City. The church Lagrande is completed, and will be con crated, together with that at Union and Ba City, at the Bishop's visitation in July.

The Architect was lyi where no ordinary boat could live; h deck had been washed almost completely, and her hull broken in two. CONSECRATION —St James Episcopal church at Milwaukie, was consecrated on Sunday last by Bishop Morris, assisted by the Rev J W Sellwood the minister in charge, the Rev J [illegible] of Salem and the Rev J W [illegible] Babcock of Oregon City The request to consecrate was read by Dr H V V Johnson the senior warden of the parish and the Sentence of Consecration was read by the Rev Mr Summers. The Bishop preached the sermon and administered the Holy Communion This is considered one of the prettiest churches that the Episcopalians have erected in this State, and that it has been done at a very moderate cost considering the good work produced The offering at the consecration services was for diocesan missions to aid other congregations in their efforts to accomplish what had been done here The Bishop stated that within the last two weeks he had laid the corner stone of two churches, and that six churches were now in process of erection in his diocese that most of these would need help from the older and stronger congregations before they were fully completed These churches now being built are at Albany, Dalles City Pendleton La Grande Union and Baker City The church at La Grande is completed, and will be consecrated together with that at Union and Baker City at the Bishop's visitation in July

The post commander thus writes of him ' As there were several vessels anchored off Fort Stevens, outward bound from which a suitable crew could be selected volunteers were called for but at his own earnest solicitation, prisoner William Patterson [an experienced sailor], was allowed to go. The Architect was lying where no ordinary boat could live her deck had been washed almost completely off, and her hull broken in two. Her masts were held erect by the rigging alone and here her crew had spent the night * * * Patterson was the most efficient man of the life boat's crew He is entitled to great credit for his conduct'

REV. E P. HAMMOND.

This distinguished revivalist brings to Portland with him a letter from the ministers at Stockton, California, of which the following is a copy

TO THE MINISTERS AND CHRISTIANS OF PORTLAND, OREGON—Dear Brethren Mr Hammond has just left us en route for your city

Knowing the difficulties he had to contend with here, and the amount of time and energy he had to expend in securing the harmonious co-operation of Christians, which might have been more profitably employed in declaring the way of salvation to sinners had we been as one with him in all things from the first as we should have been, and fearing that similar obstacles may obstruct the work with you we write in the hope that under the blessing of God a few words from us who know him, and who are to day rejoicing in the good he has done, may tend to hasten that hearty Christian co-operation that is essential to crown his labors with success

Mr Hammond is a worthy servant of the Lord, excelling in many qualities, and in none more than a holy boldness, which reaches the consciences of sinners even while they scoff or curse him. His eccentricities—if they can be called by that name which we doubt—all subserve the great object he has at heart and though at first you may be tempted to question their propriety, we can assure you from experience, that in a short time you will perceive their fitness and rejoice in them Further rumor has very much exaggerated his ways of working, especially with children, and is calculated to raise uncalled for prejudices. We saw nothing in his preaching, either to young or old that could be found fault with by any evangelical denomination or man

Give him from the start the sympathy of loving hearts, willing hands and united believing prayer and we doubt not but the Lord will bless his labors in Portland as he has done in Stockton and other cities of the coast. Christianity occupies a higher platform of respect and usefulness in our city to day than ever before, and we feel with deep regret that its advance might have been much more rapid had we greeted him on arrival with the love and the enthusiasm with which we rallied around him to say good bye and had we placed the same confidence in his sincerity and mission and followed his directions with the same ready compliance the first night he preached among us that we did the last night of his stay It is in the hope that you may not have similar cause for regret but that every day of his visit may be one of victory for the Lord and birth of souls that we give you something of our experience We have been praying for a glorious work in Portland and we will continue to remember you in our prayers May we also solicit an interest in your petitions at the throne of grace

The Pace that Kills.

It is the pace that kills People who live fast get old rapidly Nothing wears out the constitution like dissipation and late hours Hygeia goddess of health bitterly revenges herself upon all who break her laws not alone those who do so wantonly but even those who are compelled by hard necessity Constant overwork saps the physical structure with no less certainty it less rapidly than dissipated habits There is however an antidote which so far as it is in the power of medicine to retard the wear and tear of the system thus accelerated achieves that object most successfully It is preventive is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters a vitalizing ... Premature decay whether it be the result of inherent weakness & hard work continuous anxiety dissipation or disease is stayed in its withering career and the exhausted and shattered system powerfully reinforced by this grand restorative

THURSDAY MORNING, JUNE 10, 1875.

A FIERCE MOB.

DESTRUCTION OF THE JESUIT COLLEGE AT BUENOS AYRES.

The meeting of the Variedades Theater on the 28th of February was an immense concourse of people with various banners and insignia, while bands of music seemed to give echo to the popular excitement. The first speech was by the President of the University Students' Committee, Senor Beracochea; his words were full of fire, and were received with cries of "Vive la Republica," "Death to the Jesuits." Then followed speeches by Doctor Saldas, and Messrs. Zusini and Balleto and Doctor Castro Boedo, which caused a general feeling of frenzy. Some one cried out, "To the Archbishop's palace!" and then the crowd rushed out of the theater, being joined by hundreds of people on the way, till the crowd in the plaza numbered fully 20,000 persons. They had eight or ten Argentine, Spanish and Italian banners with the mottoes, "Down with the Jesuits," "Free Church and State," and the portrait of Rivadavia. The people uttered a thousand cries for the Archbishop, calling on him to join the popular movement. Then the banners were carried into the Archbishop's palace, and in going through the apartments some of those present took the religious emblems and ornaments, and threw them into the street. A policeman remonstrated with them and was beaten. The Chief of Police also attempted to prevent the riot, but had to retire. The cry was then given, "To the college!" Thereupon the banners took that direction, and the bands of music were almost drowned with the cries of the people. On reaching the college church of San Ignacio, at the corner of Calle Potosi, they dragged out benches and picture frames, using them for weapons. The sacristy doors were broken open, and the windows of the church broken. Then the word was given, "To the Salvador church," and amid the yells of 30,000 persons the crowd assembled round the Jesuit College at the corner of Calles Parque and Callao. The hall door was broken in at the same moment that a shower of stones smashed all the windows. The people poured in like an avalanche. A Jesuit at the entrance was badly wounded, and some humane person carried him to an apothecary's shop close by, where a colored man and some others wounded in the college were also getting their wounds dressed. Some respectable young men were unhappily among the mob. Meantime what occurred inside the college can only be told by eye witnesses. A hundred men sallied out with books, tables, crosses and religious emblems; others dressed in priests' clothes, by way of jest. It seems, in the struggle inside, some were killed, others wounded. Some of the Jesuits had escaped by a back door in the Calle Rio Bamba; others hid in the cellars. Then a heap was made, and soon an immense conflagration was seen, while the cries inside were still audible. There were no police on the spot; but when a cry was heard, "The soldiers are coming!" there was a general stampede, until it was found the alarm was false. The great Salvador College was all in flames, tongues of fire rushing out from its hundred windows. Now a dreadful scene ensued, many being seized with terror, others with a thirst for blood. What followed is indescribable, being a scene of murder and pillage. At last the soldiers appeared; the crowd gave way, some of the latter being killed by shots from the troops. About thirty of the rioters were arrested with sacred vessels in their possession. Most of the crowd went off in the direction of the Bishop's Seminary (Salinas); at 6 P. M. troops went in pursuit of them, and at nightfall they had taken the direction of Cabillito. Fortunately the pupils of the Jesuit College had not returned from vacation, as the schools were only to reopen in the first week in March. The college was a splendid building, erected within the last six years, and covering, with the grounds, an entire square of acres. There were two hundred pupils in the college last Christmas. Since then the only occupants were the Jesuits, some of them teachers, others employed in building the Salvador church, now nearly finished. When the crowd had made a great fire in the middle of the street, all the tables, beds, oil-paintings, church ornaments, clothing, clocks, dining and cooking utensils were thrown into the flames. Even the silver watches of the Jesuits were burnt. Some of the Jesuits were seen hanging out of the windows, as if trying to escape. Then the signal was given to fire the building, and while the flames shot up to the sky some of the Jesuits were rescued by humane persons. In a quarter of an hour the edifice was a huge volume of fire. Four Jesuits and three of the crowd are killed. There are twenty wounded, including some priests, who threw themselves from the windows. The college was set fire to with petroleum bombs, kerosene and turpentine brought for the purpose. A minute account has been presented by the deputies to the Governor, urging the utmost rigor of the law against the promoters of the riot.—Panama Star and Herald, May 2d.

A MYSTERIOUS INFLUENCE.

SINGULAR PROCEEDINGS IN A CORSET FACTORY—SEVERAL YOUNG LADIES SUCCUMB.

The particulars of an interesting occurrence at the corset factory of I. Strouse, on Oak street, Tuesday, will be of interest to students of those occult matters in the mental and physical conditions of human beings which for ages have puzzled the physicians and philosophers of the world. The facts, in brief, are as follows: In the factory of Mr. Strouse a large number of young ladies, some of considerable intelligence, are employed in the various branches of work usually performed in every large factory of the kind in the country. At about 11 o'clock in the forenoon of Tuesday, a small knot of girls stood chatting together on different topics, based upon current events as reported in the daily newspapers, and by a natural progression in the talk they came to speak of sudden deaths, and of the recitals of cases where persons had been cut off from life without previous warning of their dying day. There was all at once felt among the girls the shadow of a solemnity as of the sweep of a pall through the room, and the conversation, which had been quite lively, was in a moment hushed as though a spell of silence had been laid on every tongue. One particularly spirited and pretty girl—Miss Shea—being perhaps disinclined to acknowledge the rather unusual and fearsome sense of something awful which had come among them, in an effort at playfulness placed on a work-bench near one of the young girls a common land-turtle which had been picked up somewhere. The girl on whose bench it was laid turned and saw it, gave a shriek which sounded elfish in intensity, and immediately fell to the floor in a faint, as though she had been dead. This apparently led to a touch of horror in the minds of the other girls, some of whom grew white in countenance, with a set expression on their faces, and for an instant, not a word or cry was uttered. Soon the same kind of thing happened to another of the girls. She fell to the floor in what looked like a dead faint or the trance of a person exhausted by prolonged mental excitement leading to exhaustion. Shortly another girl was seized with the same kind of an attack, and she, too, yielded to the influence and was numbered with those who had already given way. One after another the girls fainted and fell until no less than seven of the young ladies had been brought low. The affair was so unexpected that consternation or at least deep interest was shown by the workmen employed in the men's department. Some of them grew pallid and tremulous as if with sudden fear, and pretty soon one of them was taken with an attack similar to that which afflicted the young ladies. He apparently summoned all the forces of his mind and body to resist the mysterious tendency, but he, too, yielded and fainted away. The thing began to look serious. What ailed everybody? was the question with everybody not immediately affected by or under control of this singular nervous dispensation, and at this juncture so painful was the sense of apprehension that when Mr. Morris, the foreman, ordered a stoppage of the work and a dispersion of the work people to their homes a great relief was felt. All were required to move off quietly, and by this judicious treatment no further demonstration became possible.—New Haven Journal, May 20th.

There is no increase of an important character in the demand for money in the local market, and good paying investments when shown, are readily made. There is but little disposition on the part of business men to speculate largely, improvements are not moving forward very rapidly, and as the summer progresses, trade slackens up. The circulating capital of the country is not large, and the creation of more sources of employment is an object which is engaging the attention of those whose interests lead them to wish the growth of the State. The situation here now is very different from that of our sister city of San Francisco. The June number of the Real Estate Circular of that city says:

Property owners are having their attention turned from buying vacant lots into improving those they already own. Houses of all kinds are extremely scarce, despite the vast numbers that have been erected within the past year. The rush of building is unprecedented. There cannot be less than 10,000 mechanics and laborers now directly engaged upon new buildings, not to speak at all of those indirectly employed on work for them at the planing mills, foundries, etc.

In Oregon, it is true, a very encouraging degree of activity is noted in some of the interior towns in the way of local improvements giving circulation to considerable amounts of capital, but it is very doubtful if a corresponding animation exists in Portland, and though the fact is perhaps not to be deplored, the State is outgrowing Portland. While trade and commerce here are flourishing, the actual permanent wealth and population of the city scarcely keeps pace with them.

Sheep and Wool.

The wool clip has been very backward in coming in this year, and the fact may be partially accounted for in the following, which is written to the Farmer, from Wasco county, by one who seems to understand the condition of affairs pretty well:

"Our stock raisers are very active in looking after their herds and dispose of their most choice beeves at prices varying from 3 to 3½ cents per pound, net. I learn there has been weighed and sold from Hood's stable and stock yards 496 head during the month, how many from other yards I could not ascertain, but presume as many more.

The mutton market is very quiet, the demand for sheep for mutton is governed by the supply needed on the Sound ports and Victoria, consequently our surplus mutton market is regulated by the foreign markets.

I understand that the wool producers are determined to compel speculators to pay them living prices for their wools this season, or they will hold it in store—how this will work is a question of time. The clip this side of the mountains will be much increased this season, not only in quantity but quality. As a general thing all kinds of stock are in splendid condition, which seems to encourage the stock men."

Wheat Tonnage.

We spoke recently of the amount of tonnage which would be required for the surplus grain crop of Oregon this year, and estimated that 150 ships of 1,000 tons each would be necessary to carry it away. In that estimate, we took into consideration the probability that at least 8,000 or 10,000 tons would be carried over after the harvest year begins, and that the crop would amount to about 140,000 tons. Since the 1st of September, 1874, the shipments have been nearly 100,000 tons (the cargo of the City of Vienna will make fully that amount). Of course a portion of the crop will be shipped by coasters to San Francisco and an insignificant amount go to northern ports, but with average prices in the English market there is no reason why the increase in our foreign exports should not show as great an increase in 1875-76 over those of the current year as this year does over last.

During the past year most of the vessels arriving here have come under charter, the following showing how many vessels suitable for the grain trade have entered the Columbia river during the year:

Arrived under charter	56
Arrived seeking charter	14
Arrived and loaded on owners' account	4
Total	74
Departed in ballast	2

Many of these were doubtless chartered before this time last year. At present we can hear of no vessels to arrive under charter, but have no doubt there are some, though the prospect for an abundant tonnage supply is not so good as in 1874. High freights in 1873 turned many ships this way last year and the low freights which have prevailed during the latter part of the present season will probably have the reverse effect on the tonnage supply the coming year.

Shipping Intelligence.

The steamship Ajax, which arrived last night, brought 642 tons assorted merchandise. She will sail on return trip to-morrow evening at 6 o'clock.

The Gussie Telfair had not arrived at a late hour this evening.

The Salem flouring mills are now grinding for a cargo to send to Liverpool by the splendid iron ship City of Vienna. She can carry about 1,700 tons of cargo, and will load principally with flour. It will take the month to prepare her load, but the company has all the wheat purchased and will have no trouble to make up the cargo.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake with the Iodides of Potassium and Iron makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system, that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ, or organs, whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidneys, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female weakness, Sterility, Leucorrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure health returns.

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever.

It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.

It removes all eruptions, itching, and dandruff; and the scalp by its use becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness, and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purpose."
